It is important for you to know that the university takes all reports of harassment very seriously. If you contact an advisor everything that you discuss with us is confidential, and kept between you and the advisor. Often, students are afraid that when they come to us they will lose control of the situation. That is not true. You are in the driver's seat, and you decide what you want to have happen. Some students only want Co-op or EDGE to be aware of their situation, but do not want any intervention. Another student might wish to describe their situation with the hopes of getting some coaching on how best to request that behavior stop. Another student may wish to have us intervene or accompany them as they speak to their employer about the situation reported. All of this is assuming that there is no threatening behavior or safety issues. If anyone is unsafe we must intervene as it is important that the campus, or local police be contacted. When the police are involved, their actions take precedents over those of the university staff.
